- Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders between two groups of nurses working in different departments of a tertiary care hospital. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was determined by means of a self-administered questionnaire among 100 nurses from the intensive care unit (ICU) and 100 nurses from the medical-surgical department. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among ICU nurses than among medical-surgical nurses. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was significantly higher among ICU nurses than among medical-surgical nurses. The prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was significantly higher among ICU nurses than among medical-surgical nurses.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has identified the need to develop a new paradigm of care for the ageing population, one that is based on the concept of 'active ageing'. This paradigm is based on the idea that ageing is a process, not a state, and that the goal of care should be to promote the health and well-being of older people, rather than to simply manage their decline.

The Department of Health (1999) has identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting the health and well-being of older people; (2) ensuring that older people have access to the services and resources they need; and (3) ensuring that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.

The Department of Health (1999) has also identified a number of key areas for research in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) understanding the needs of older people; (2) understanding the barriers to access to services and resources; and (3) understanding the factors that influence the health and well-being of older people.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

As the world's population grows, the demand for food and other resources will increase. This will put pressure on the environment and on the world's food supply.

One way to meet this demand is to increase the amount of food that is produced. This can be done by using more land for agriculture, by using more water, or by using more fertilizers and pesticides.

Another way to meet this demand is to reduce the amount of food that is wasted. This can be done by improving the way that food is stored and distributed, or by changing the way that people eat.

There are many ways to meet the world's growing demand for food and other resources. It is up to us to decide which way is the best.

One of the most important things we can do is to make sure that we are using resources in a sustainable way. This means that we are using resources in a way that will not harm the environment or the future generations.

There are many things we can do to make sure that we are using resources in a sustainable way. We can reduce the amount of waste that we produce, we can use less energy, and we can use less water.

By making these changes, we can help to make sure that the world's food and other resources will be available for everyone in the future.

It is our responsibility to make sure that we are using resources in a sustainable way. We must act now to make sure that the world's food and other resources will be available for everyone in the future.

One way to meet this demand is to increase the amount of land that is used for agriculture. This can be done by clearing more land for farming or by using more land for grazing.

Another way to meet this demand is to increase the amount of food that is produced on the land that is already being used. This can be done by using more fertilizers and pesticides or by using more advanced farming techniques.

One of the most important things we can do is to make sure that we are using the land and resources that we have in a responsible way. This means that we need to be careful not to overuse the land and resources and that we need to make sure that we are using them in a way that will be sustainable for the future.

There are many things that we can do to make sure that we are using the land and resources in a responsible way. Some of these things include:

- Using fertilizers and pesticides carefully.
